LEARN HOW TO

- Understand what data analytics is, and the key ingredients for sustainable analytics
- Understand the analytics value and the part that effective communications with data plays in delivering the “last mile” of value
- Understand the key principles behind developing and telling a concise, coherent, and compelling story from the data
- Gain practical data storyboarding skills through a structured approach in the application through a case exercise
- Translate the data storyboard in the case exercise into a presentation deck that tells a concise, coherent, and compelling story.

“83% of HR leaders from organisations across Singapore, Malaysia and Hong Kong agree that HR analytics is helping to build the long-term strategy of their business.” – Chartered Institute of Personnel & Development (CIPD), 2015

Over the past decade, there has been a rise in organizations adopting data analytics as one of the core competencies for growth. This growth was built upon the growing evidence of the value that data analytics creates; specifically, how it augments and improves the decision-making process in organizations. While HR came to analytics a little later in the game, leaders in organizations are recognizing the potential it could hold and hence adoption has also been growing.

This is ONE of FOUR workshops in a comprehensive series on the topic of HR Analytics. Each workshop is modular in nature, addressing different aspects along the analytics value chain.

- Managing & Processing Data for Reporting and Analysis
- Mining data for HR Insights
- Asking the right questions to make informed decisions
- Building a Compelling HR Narrative from Data

WHY YOU SHOULD ATTEND

One of the most overlooked and undervalued aspects along the analytics value chain is in the “last mile” of value; specifically, how to tell a concise, coherent, and compelling story from the HR data to drive people decisions and actions. While there is ample supply of hard skills and capabilities in many analytics functions; the softer skills of contextualization and storytelling are in much shorter supply. In fact, Forbes had foresaw the emergence of this trends as early as 2016.

“Data are just summaries of thousands of stories – tell a few of those stories to make the data meaningful.” Dan Heath

This workshop aims to provide a broad but practical overview of the entire analytics value chain; with a focus on building a compelling narrative to get an audience to care and to act. This includes how to glean pivotal messages from data, how to structure and tell a data story that makes an audience care. This workshop aims to address such capability gaps; especially for HR professionals and managers who have some experience with analysis; but are finding some challenges in making an impact in the “last mile” of value in analytics.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

- Senior HR Leaders
- HR Directors and Functional Heads
- HR Business Partners
- All other HR professionals who wish to know how to tell a compelling story from HR data

LOGISTICS REQUIREMENTS

Participants are required to use their own laptops with MS Excel and PowerPoint (version 2013 or later) to participate in the data and capstone exercise. Please note that some Excel functions may not look the same in a Macbook. The virtual sessions will be conducted via Zoom, so please ensure that you have stable wireless access and are using a device that allows Zoom.
